

General Discussion Questions on Unpredictability of Life

How do authors use sudden or tragic events to emphasize the unpredictability of life?

Can you identify a scene where a character's life changes dramatically without warning?

In what ways does the unpredictability of life challenge or shape a character's identity or worldview?

How does the character respond to these changes?

How does fate or chance operate in the story?

Is the unpredictability portrayed as random, or is it tied to a larger theme (fate, destiny, divine will)?

Are characters in the story ever able to regain control after a disruptive event?

What does this say about human resilience or adaptability?

Does the unpredictability of life create more harm or opportunity for the characters?

Can it be seen as a catalyst for growth or just chaos?