

General Discussion Questions on Loss of Innocence

In what ways does society contribute to or accelerate the character's loss of innocence?

Does the character gain wisdom or merely cynicism after losing innocence?

Can innocence ever be regained once it's lost?

Is the loss of innocence portrayed as a necessary part of growing up, or as a tragedy?

In what ways does society contribute to or accelerate the character's loss of innocence?

How do different characters in the story respond to innocence and experience?