

General Discussion Questions on Envy

Can envy ever be depicted positively, or as a tool for self-awareness and growth?

How does envy affect the moral compass of characters? Are envious characters punished, rewarded, or something in between?

Does the narrative suggest that envy is inherent to human nature, or is it shaped by society and circumstances?

Are there characters who overcome envy, and what does that process tell us about the author's view on human nature?

How is envy connected to themes such as ambition, desire, jealousy, or social status?