

General Discussion Questions on Individualism

How does literature explore the tension between individual freedom and societal expectations?

Can true individuality exist within the constraints of society?

In what ways does the individual's moral code come into conflict with social or political systems?

How do moments of conformity reveal aspects of individual identity?

To what extent is the idea of the "individual" itself a literary construct?

Does literature suggest that individualism leads to fulfillment, alienation, or both?