

General Discussion Questions on Greed

Can a character's greed be justified by their circumstances, or is it purely a moral failing?

How does greed interact with other themes like power, ambition, or corruption?

Are there examples of characters whose greed leads to positive outcomes? What does that say about the author's perspective?

How does the narrative portray the moral implications of greed—does it punish, reward, or remain neutral?

Can you identify literary devices (irony, satire, allegory) used to explore greed?